How to Use Outlook.com to Retrieve your POP Inbox in Windows 8 Mail

1. Log in to Outlook.com. If you don't have a Microsoft account, create one.

2. Select More mail settings from the settings menu in the upper right corner of the screen.

3. Click Sending / receiving email from other accounts under Managing Your Account.

4. Click Add an email account under the You Can Receive Email from These Accounts header.

5. Click Advanced options.

6. Configure your email settings by entering your email address, POP server name, checking or unchecking SSL and choosing other options as necessary. Click Next when done.

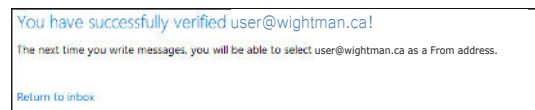

The screenshot shows two sections of an email setup wizard. The first section, 'Account info', has the heading 'Enter an email address below.' and a text box containing 'user@wightman.ca'. The second section, 'POP3 server information', has the heading 'Enter POP3 server information your email provider has given you.' and includes fields for 'Server address' (mail.wightman.ca), 'Port' (110), a checkbox for 'Use SSL' (unchecked), a checked checkbox for 'Leave a copy of my messages on the server', 'User name' (user), and a 'Password' field. At the bottom are 'Next' and 'Cancel' buttons.

7. Select Your inbox to have your received mail saved to your inbox.

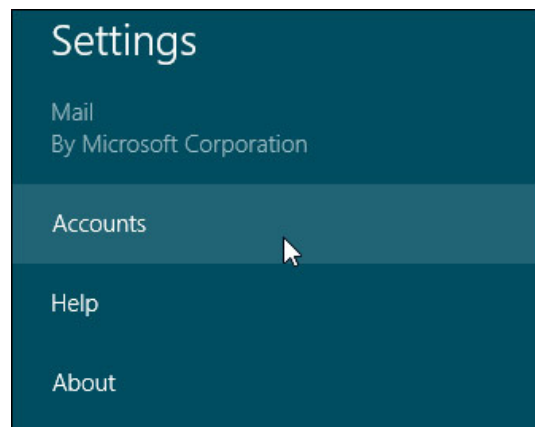

The screenshot shows a question: 'When mail is received via user@wightman.ca, where do you want it saved?'. There are two radio button options: 'A new folder called: @wightman - user' (unchecked) and 'Your inbox' (checked). A 'Save' button is at the bottom.

8. Verify your email address by clicking a link that comes in a confirmation email that Microsoft sends to your POP account. Your Outlook.com account should now show all the messages that are stored in your POP account.

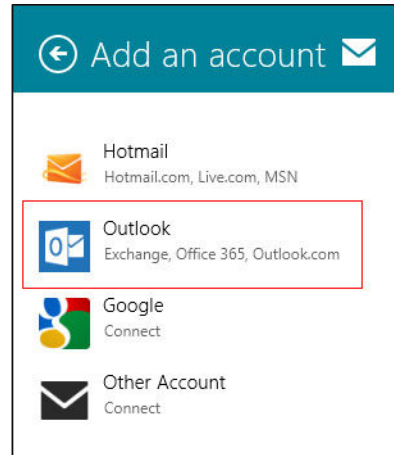

The screenshot shows a confirmation message: 'You have successfully verified user@wightman.ca!'. Below it, it says 'The next time you write messages, you will be able to select user@wightman.ca as a From address.' and a 'Return to inbox' link.

9. Select Accounts under Settings in the Windows 8 Mail app.

10. Select Outlook.

11. Enter your Outlook.com username and password then click Connect.
